

Merging in New Datasets - UI Claimants/Community College

By: Andre K Smith, FETPIP Director

GENERAL ACTIVITIES

The Florida Education Training Placement Information Program (FETPIP) is an interagency data collection system that obtains follow-up data on former students and workforce program participants. It relies solely on administrative data available from the State and Federal government. It is the nation's longest operation of its type in that it was originally established by the Florida legislature in 1984. It is currently authorized and funded by Section 1008.39 Florida Statutes. FETPIP is unique among the states in that it develops follow-up data for Public & Private education at cell levels as well as federal workforce programs.

FETPIP collects follow-up data that describe the employment, military enlistment, incarceration, public assistance participation, and continuing education experience of the participants being followed. It accomplishes its data collection by electronically linking participant files to the administrative records of other state and federal agencies.
